State agency representatives to be in Hurley, Ashland and Hayward Friday to meet with local government officials about storm-related damage
Combining several state agencies in one location will allow local officials to ask questions, get information about resources available to repair public infrastructure damaged in July 11-12 storms

Officials from the Wisconsin Department of Transportation (WisDOT), Department of Natural Resources (DNR) and other state agencies will be in Hurley, Ashland and Hayward on Friday (July 22) to provide information and assistance to local governments impacted by last week's flooding. The goal is to establish a "one-stop-shop" where municipal officials can get information from the various state agencies involved in responding to last week's floods that caused significant damage to roads and other public infrastructure.

Along with officials from the DNR and Wisconsin Emergency Management, WisDOT staff will be available to assist local government officials in assessing damage to roadways and to help identify funding for needed repairs. Representatives from the state Board of Commissioners of Public Lands can provide information on loans available to municipalities, school and technical college districts, public inland lake protection and rehabilitation districts, town sanitary districts, metropolitan and joint sewerage districts and systems, cooperative educational service agencies (CESAs), federated public library systems and drainage districts.

State agency officials will be available at the following locations and hours on Friday:

- Hurley: 8:30 - 10 a.m.
Iron County Courthouse, 300 Taconite Street, Hurley, Wisconsin (County Board Room)
- Ashland: 11:30 a.m. - 1 p.m.
